For the classification of student organisations, the following should be taken into account (applicants must indicate the date of the activity concerned):

- Spring 2020 accreditation should be taken into account, so it is the currently awarded category that counts, not the previous one.
- If the organisation does not currently exist/is not accredited, the most recent category awarded will be taken into account.

- If students refer to a previous activity (but not older than 5 years), the category to which the student organisation belonged at the end of the students' active activity will be taken into account.
- If students have completed their student organisation activities before the new accreditation system came into force (autumn 2019), the category achieved in the first accreditation in autumn 2019 will be taken into account.

If students are pursuing a Master's degree, the undergraduate activity is also worth points. If students have not been a member of a student organisation or a student council accredited by Corvinus University of Budapest, they can receive points for their past verified activities based on the S2-K2 categories.

4) Motivation letter in the language of study: max 17 points

Applications must be accompanied by 1 motivation letter for the first three places of application in the order of preference. The motivation letter must be filled in using the form available in the MOBility Manager interface.

The main aspects of writing a motivation letter:

- It must be written in the language of the studies to be carried out at the university concerned (where appropriate, the motivation letter may be multilingual in the section on universities if the student is applying to institutions in different languages);
- In the motivation letter, applicants must provide a concrete preliminary plan with a list of courses to be taken at the chosen institution in accordance with the requirements in the home country (list the names of the courses chosen, indicate the courses already taken and those still to be taken and refer to their availability at the foreign institution (the courses list offered by the target university)).
- If applicants intend to take courses in more than one language at the same institution, they should prepare their application in the language that will dominate their studies;
- The motivation letter should explain why the institutions are relevant to the student's studies or career;
- The motivation letter should describe the student's objectives for the mobility programme (e.g. to increase professional competence, broaden horizons)
