The aim of the program – which is developed and delivered in a cooperation with PMI Budapest, Hungarian Chapter – is to train project managers who can meet the 21st century expectations, can manage moderately complex projects in virtual and traditional, national and international environment. The program not only focuses on giving an overview about the classic and most recent theories but also provide a way of using them in practical context. It is important students, who successfully completes this program, can use the learnt tools and techniques in their daily work. Thus, the program combines traditional project management trainings with the expectations of the modern era.
